

Susan Higgins

After a career in academe, I began making pictures in 2007, studying on my own and at the Rayko Center in San Francisco.

For me, photography is a way to frame aspects of the world that can be reflected upon over time. It is an inherently personal exchange between the photographer and viewer. The photograph blurs the lines between image and self, memory and history, past, present and future. I am drawn to its immediacy, flexibility and possibility.

I shoot with a Nikon D300, a Leica C and an iPhone. I print my own work.

My work is in a number of private collections from exhibition and gallery sales, and auctions. I currently reside in upstate NY, enjoying occasional residence on the CT shore.
