Place based/community public and environmental art

2011-12 Teaneck Creek Conservancy, Teaneck, NJ

Fycke Lane entrance, a 350' long boundary and entrance placemaking feature. Realized Phase III including placement of 8 interpretive signworks, recycled concrete stone wall, zinc plaques with art and poetry by students from LIUpost and local middle school. Funding and grant support have been provided through Bergen County Parks, NJ Green Acres, Puffin Foundation, Jentel Foundation, the Geraldine R. Dodge Foundation, C. W. Post Research Grant Committee, and the NJ State Council on the Arts.

2010 Teaneck Creek Conservancy, Teaneck, NJ

Realized Phase II plans for the Fycke Lane entrance, a 350' long boundary and entrance placemaking feature. Phase I (2008) included recycled concrete pillars and robust fencing providing the armature for Phase II. Phase II saw local school papermaking workshop with artist Jane Ingram Allen, including weaving of vines through armature creating the metaphoric native American "fycke" or animal trap. Phase III scheduled for 2011 includes placement of 8 interpretive signworks, recycled concrete stone wall and a Lenape totem cross walk connecting the park with the local middle school. Funding as above.

2009 Teaneck Creek Conservancy, Teaneck, NJ

Team member of a three artist group working with area middle school to research local cultural and environmental history, create images and paint sculptural mural on five concrete sewer pipes - debris left behind during the construction of I-80-95. Part of the rehabilitation of this 46-acre brownfields to greenfield site in the northern NJ meadows. Funding by NJ State Council on the Arts and the Puffin Foundation, other private firms.

2007 Greystone Park Pictorial History, Morris Plains, NJ

Four murals in porcelain enamel on steel for the lobby of the new Greystone Park Psychiatric Hospital. Commissioned under the Public Buildings Arts Inclusion Act of 1978. A Project of New Jersey Economic Development Authority, New Jersey Department of Human Services, and the New Jersey State Council on the Arts.

2005-06 Bass River State Forest Stories, Little Egg Harbor, NJ

23' long narrative sculptural and interpretive feature for new park administrative office. Narrative graphics reveal the 100 - year history of changing land use in New Jersey's oldest state park, based on interviews and research of local community. The project is made possible by the Public Building Arts Inclusion Act of 1978. The Arts Inclusion program is administered by the New Jersey State Council on the Arts.

2005-06 Walking Trees / Talking Trees, Dix Hills Park, Huntington, NY and Teaneck Creek Conservancy, Teaneck, NJ. A temporary installation as part of the Town of Huntington Public Art Initiative. 45 etched zinc plates celebrating the active nature of 45 of these park's trees. Set in an active recreation park, these plaques remind viewers of the important functions of trees in our landscape. Action verbs, drawings and descriptions and stories will illuminate the message. With students from Hawthorne Elementary school, Northport, NY H.S. and students of the C. W. Post / LIU's Printmaking Workshop.

2005 Buzzoni Farmstead /An Heirloom Landscape, Closter, NJ. Commissioned by the Closter, NJ Environmental Commission, a narrative signwork reveals the site history and changing land use patterns of the area.

2003 - 2009 Broad Street Station Stories at the Broad Street, Newark, NJ train station. A series of 19 porcelain enamel signworks of collaged artifacts, images and text that seek to connect the transportation public to local history and the surrounding communities. The Broad Street Station project was made possible by the Public Building Arts Inclusion Act of 1978. The Arts Inclusion program is administered by the New Jersey State Council on the Arts. Funding is by NJ Transit.

2001 - 2006 Teaneck Creek Conservancy Teaneck, NJ. Artist-in-residence at the Teaneck Creek Conservancy, Inc. and team member with landscape architect Blair Hines & Associates and Rutgers University wetlands scientist Dr. Beth Ravit and others in a brownfield to greenfield restoration of a 46 acre wetlands in the Hackensack Meadowlands. Place responsive eco-art, trails, wetlands restoration and outdoor classrooms are components of collaboration with the community, Township of Teaneck and Bergen Co. Dept. of Parks on this former landfill site. Responsibilities included interpretive graphical placemaking; research and archiving of historic local maps, photos, images and text; liaison between artists and place narratives. www.teaneckcreek.org

1998 - 2006 Hackensack River Stories Project, Teaneck and Secaucus, NJ
A site specific public art project of life lived on, in and along the Hackensack River. Sixteen digitally imaged and printed signworks placed along the 3.5 mile Hackensack River Greenway through Teaneck that evoke narratives of cultural history, ecological loss and restoration and memory associated with this important and recovering river landscape. Research of visual artifacts and text was conducted in local historical societies, libraries, document collections and through oral history. 2001: 7 additional signworks for Secaucus, NJ wetlands mitigation site commissioned by the New Jersey Meadowlands Commission.

1996 X Community Garden. Armory Street Redevelopment Project / City of Englewood, New Jersey. With community residents and volunteers, designed, constructed and planted a garden consisting of paths forming the letter X, a house shape and planting beds containing native ornamental shrubs, perennials and grasses. The building lot had been the site of a chop shop which was condemned and torn down leaving only contaminated soil.
