Welcome!

The 20th Annual City-Wide Open Studios

Welcome to the 20th annual City-Wide Open Studios! Thank you for attending and for your participation in the original creative expression on display that ignites joy and wonderment. The artwork on display and the lectures that make CWOS so meaningful for thousands of visitors enjoying this important art

"moment" is admired and appreciated by a very grateful City of New Haven.

Likewise, a word of THANKS to Helen Kauder and the bold leadership at Artspace, a pivotal destination in the cultural landscape of New Haven – this year celebrating more than 30 years of original and trend-setting, thought-provoking talent.

City-Wide Open Studios is the centerpiece of this month-long celebration of artistic achievement. This annual celebration is enhanced by studio visits, unique workspaces, and special gallery exhibitions across this historic city. What's in store is literally a treasure-trove of talent and desirable / collectible artworks! It's a once-a-year gem not to be missed – don't forget to tweet and share the moment with friends everywhere!

New Haven has undeniable, global recognition as a destination in the Creativity Economy with City-Wide Open Studios a sure-bet "calling-card" to attract artists and visitors from far and wide. This year's Guide delineates a superb selection of inspiring and imaginative artwork. Like you, I always look forward to attending this very special moment on The Elm City's Arts Calendar.

Whatever the medium: sculpture, painting, prints, collage, jewelry, textiles, installations or mixed media works... each studio visit and every interaction and engagement with participating artists validates this amazing initiative and reinforces New Haven as The PLACE to BE – Where Ideas Matter!

As Mayor of this forward-thinking city, I welcome all visitors to City-Wide Open Studios with an invitation for you to also enjoy the city's acclaimed inventory of retail shops, restaurants, and regional attractions during your visit to the CWOS.

CWOS has become a novel place-holder in our ongoing (and timely) national narrative about 'why art matters.' That question is answered each year through this remarkable interactive public art experience curated and hosted by Artspace New Haven. During your journey, take a moment to reflect on how art and creative expression exemplify a truly free republic.

Toni N. Harp
Mayor, City of New Haven

Art is a powerful part of our economy. The Arts generates jobs, cultural tourism and economic impact. Equally as valuable, art helps to create community identity and vibrancy, encouraging people of all backgrounds to connect with each other. The City-Wide Open Studios Festival is indicative of what it means to provide arts access to diverse audiences. The festival celebrates this power by showcasing and supporting artists from all disciplines across the state. This year's theme "fact/fiction" calls for artists to explore the distinction between reality and illusion within the current political climate. In addition, artists are being encouraged to embrace a culture that supports curiosity, action and awareness, in, about and through the arts.

I interact with artists every day, but CWOS provides a unique opportunity for me to meaningfully connect with local artists to learn about their work and process. Year after year, Artspace continues to curate a festival that combats the norm and inspires critical thinking through the arts. The City Wide Open Studios festival is the perfect example of the cultural vibrancy that exists within our great State.

Kristina Newman Scott
Director of Culture, Department of Economic & Community Development, State of Connecticut

For 20 years, City-Wide Open Studios has played a critical role in the cultural life of Greater New Haven and the State of Connecticut. From the first time that artists at Erector Square shook hands with one another and met in 1998, to the thousands of visitors over the years who have come to delight in the creative work set in iconic spaces like the Pirelli Building and now the Goffe Street Armory, CWOS, presented and organized by Artspace, has been an exuberant, yet steady source of community vitality and creative inspiration.

At the 20-year mark, a Festival like CWOS thinks back to its origins, when artists seemed disenfranchised from the polity and from civic concerns. The impulse in 1998 was to forge connections, literally connecting dots on a map made up of marks, each one made by hand by an artist who had been invited to “put yourself on the map.”

The transformation of our community has been remarkable on so many dimensions. Artists hold more power than ever before, are more networked than throughout history, and are understood to be unique and innovative agents of change. What now exists in our community's conception of itself did not exist when we started CWOS.

The fracturing of our lives at a time when the battle between fact and fiction has never felt more consequential is our chosen theme that has galvanized some of the festival's most adventurous work, and our 2017 lineup attests to the sheer number and variety of ways in which our most vital artists are pushing the possibilities of their practice.

As you explore the studios this month, know that Artspace continues to stand by our mission to catalyze artistic activity, to connect artists, audiences and resources, and to enrich art experiences and activate art. Your participation, whether as artist, visitor, collaborator or partner, and your curiosity, empathy and generosity fuel this artistic community. Thank you for being part of the Festival.

Helen Kauder

Executive Director, Artspace

Welcome to Artspace's City-Wide Open Studios! This year marks the 20th Anniversary of what has become the largest open studios event in the region. The theme this year is fRact/fiction, a provocation related to the 'fake news' and 'fact checking' aspects of our current political and media environment.

From October 6 to November 7, you will see a number of performances, installations, and sculptures that address an array of national and local questions. These range from what it means to be American to what impact the Goffe Street Armory has in its neighborhood.

In addition to this thought-provoking work, CWOS illustrates how the New Haven community of artists, local government, businesses, schools, organizations, and volunteers, can come together and put on a truly spectacular series of events of which the entire city can be proud. Over the course of these five weeks, I encourage you to immerse yourself in the intimacy of the private artist studios, the grandness of the Armory, and the energy of the shared workspaces in Erector Square and Westville.

Behind the scenes of all the amazing artwork is a very small group of tireless and committed Artspace staff members. I want to personally thank them each for their commitment to the success of CWOS. This event is a reality thanks to their efforts.

So, on behalf of the staff and board of Artspace, we hope you enjoy all that CWOS has to offer... and that's a fact!

Matt Maleska

Board President, Artspace

f[R]act Fiction

Congratulations! You have in your hands the indispensable Guide to the next five weeks of City-Wide Open Studios. We invite you to visit the main exhibition at Artspace and circle the artists that interest you. The maps in the Guide will then help you find each one.

Each year, CWOS adopts a theme that prompts artists and visitors to reflect on and engage around issues that impact our community. This year, we invited artists to respond to the shifting stakes in the use and abuse of truth and alternative facts, the resulting fracturing of the body politic, and the urgency of envisioning new and empowering narratives.

f[R]act/Fiction would not be possible without our funders and partnering institutions, organizations and community leaders. This year's notable collaborators include the Department of Corrections, New Haven Correctional Center, Nasty Women, A Broken Umbrella Theatre, Literary Happy Hour, and students and faculty at Yale School of Architecture.

Westville Weekend: Oct 7 – 8 p 8 – 11

After last year's launch of our new kickoff weekend, all the artists are galvanized to celebrate the tight-knit creative community in Westville.

Alternative Space Weekend: Oct 14 – 15 p 12 – 27

165 artists, groups, collectives, art departments, along with 12 major commissions and specially-invited projects, combine to offer audiences an exuberant and immersive experience across a huge vacant building.

Private Studios Weekend: Oct 21 – 22 p 28 – 34

A rare chance to step inside private homes and work spaces. Use the map to serve as your guide, or join a cycling tour. Plan ahead to catch all the artists—some are open only one day.

Erector Square Weekend: Oct 28 – 29 p 36 – 43

A unique, open-door invitation to visit the largest studio complex in New Haven where some of New Haven's most established artists work, in what was once the Erector Set toy factory.

November Programs: Oct 31 – Nov 9 p 44

More ways for people to come together to keep celebrating New Haven's creative community and rally around the upcoming City election, in support of vital causes under threat as never before.

Greyson Hong: YOUR ONLY LIMIT IS YOU.

October 6 – November 9 | The Project Room, Artspace, 50 Orange Street

2016-17 Artspace Artist-in-Residence Greyson Hong presents a philosophical and mathematically-minded multimedia project. Produced in the wake of the 2016 Presidential Election, this ongoing body of work merges traditional and unconventional means of tracking data to map the artist's social, ancestral, and economic networks, and measure her capacity for connecting with others.

For each study, Hong presents the viewer with concrete starting points: a given playing field, a set of rules, and tools for visualizing the data she collects. She is the actor, animating each set with her body. Her studies range in topic, style and content, and include charts of her masculinity changing over time, recordings of number of times she has googled "protest", and photographic studies of objects that fit her 5'6" embrace. Each study complicates the distinction between objective and empirical evidence; the information gathered is always relative to her body, speed and network.

Rideshare: Zoe Matthiessen

Saturday, October 21, 3pm

Rain Date: Sunday, October 22

Meet at 915 Whitney Avenue

Zoe Matthiessen will guide a tour through her "Gallery in the Woods," a trail through East Rock Park beginning at the covered bridge at the Eli Whitney Museum and ending at East Rock Road.

Matthiessen has painted about 25 scenes along this trail, often tacking up a print for a passerby to snatch as they walk along. She also hosts a regular scavenger hunt through the New Haven Independent—Picture This.

For this event, she will tack up all her prints, at their corresponding locations. Highlights include wildly deformed trees such as Swamp Thing and massive root formations such as Tree-rantula. Random woods creatures will also be hidden along the trail. Pine cones and tree sap will be served.

Free! Pre-registration required; visit cwos.org to register.

A Broken Umbrella Theatre: Exchange

Saturday & Sunday, October 14 – 15
Daily at 12:30pm & 5pm
The Drill Hall, Goffe Street Armory
290 Goffe Street

A Broken Umbrella Theatre spent four months visiting retirement communities and community groups throughout the region, recording stories about participants' relationships with the telephone, communication, and personal exchange. These stories inspired Exchange, a production that explores both New Haven's history as the home of the first telephone switchboard and exchange and residents' personal histories.

Literary Happy Hour

Sunday, October 15, 4 – 6pm
Goffe Street Armory, 290 Goffe Street

A guided journey through the transformed Armory to discover and experience four amazing local writers and scores of local visual artists! Meet your tour guide and curator Hanifa Washington at the main entrance at 4pm.

Artist Commissions

1 Ian Donaldson, Daniel Glick-Unterman and Olisa Agulue: garden—pleasure

Seven 'gardens,' designed by seven teams of artists, creating seven occupiable atmospheric installations. The garden allegorizes many tenuous states, from the fragility of political order to ecological precarity in the age of climate change.

2 Zeph Farmby: Brainwashed

Eight-foot-tall heads of young black men are covered with racialized pop culture images, questioning the role that media has in shaping stereotypes. Viewers are invited to decipher what is true and what is a result of societal brainwashing.

3 Theresa Gooby: The Lazarus Library

A specimen wall of extinct fictional creatures, this work combines mythology and science to question beliefs about what existed in history and the memory of scientific learning.

4 Young Joo Lee: Paradise Limited

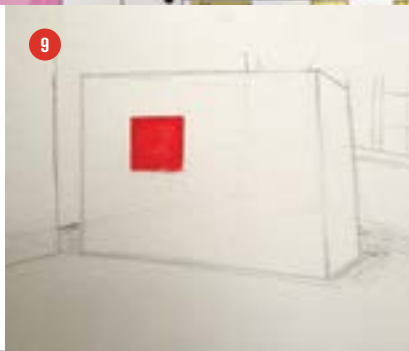

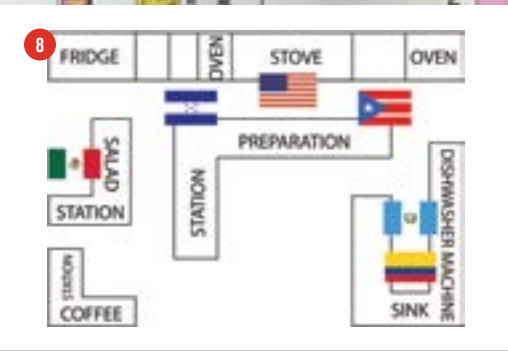

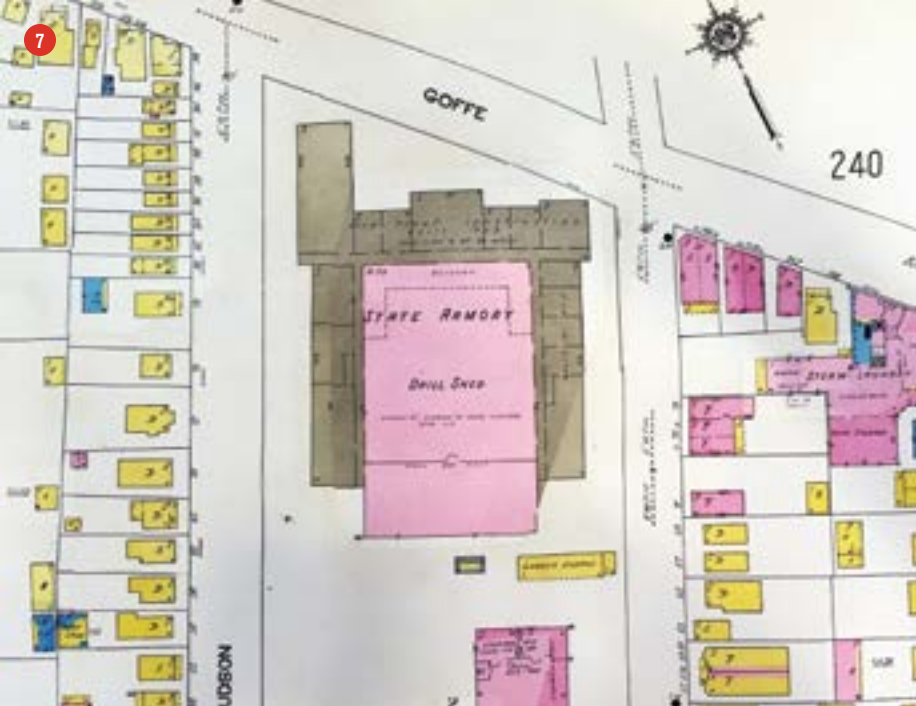

Using three simultaneous video screens and reimagining the forest as a feminine entity, the artist explores the Korean Demilitarized Zone as both a place of danger and of refuge.

5 Adam Niklewicz: Best Thing to Hold in Your Hands

As the artist sits behind a table on a raised platform, viewers are invited to join him and guess what he is holding in his hands.

6 John O'Donnell: Neo-American Post-Teen Day-Dream

This performance piece explores ideas of what it means to be an American by combining a stereotypical front lawn scene with an astronaut-like inflatable suit mobile performance.

Alternative Space Weekend
October 14-15
290 Goffe Street, New Haven

7 Students from the Yale School of Architecture and New Haven Academy, led by Yale University professor Elihu Rubin: Excavating the Armory

An exhibition on the historic Goffe Street Armory engages the community in a conversation about the past, present, and future of the Armory and its surrounding environs.

8 Cesar Valdes: Come Come

This work focuses on the reality of immigrants working in the food industry, which ends up transforming into a regulated system, an art project.

9 Brittany Whiteman and Kyle Skar: Untitled

When visitors enter this installation, they see a red shape through a hole in a white wall. Exploring the space and discovering the truth of the red square allows each participant to interpret the installation and make it his or her own.

10 Maria Gaspar: Sounds for Liberation

Sounds for Liberation is an audio project that examines issues of boundaries and divisions between the New Haven Correctional Facility, the Goffe Street Armory, and the surrounding neighborhood.

Audio recordings of song, personal narratives, storytelling and the spoken word, collected from youth, community members and the currently detained, are available to listen to in various locations around the neighborhood. By focusing on the voice, this project creates a common ground, connecting and building relationships at places of disconnection and isolation. No lines will be drawn, but rather, they will be erased.

Alternative Space: October 14-15

New!

New Haven Public School Partnerships

This year, Artspace inaugurated a special program in partnership with educators and students in the New Haven Public School District that uses City-Wide Open Studios as a rich curriculum for learning. In addition to these projects, Artspace welcomes students from Elm City College Prep who will learn at Erector Square as part of the Expeditions Program and from Betsey Ross who will hold class at the CWOS Main Exhibition at Artspace.

Armory Futures

New Haven Academy high school students and Yale students worked together to generate proposals for a future Armory, imagining how it might be used and what design changes could be made to facilitate these visions. Part of the project Excavating the Armory, see page 15.

Pool Noodle Project

Common Ground School students collaborated with mathematician-artists Dan Bernier and Dan Gries, who continue their project to enliven the Goffe Street Armory windows with woven strips of cut pool noodles, based on pixelated imagery on botanical themes.

Sounds for Liberation

Hillhouse, Metro Business, New Haven Academy and Wilbur Cross students worked with artist Maria Gaspar on an audio project examining issues of boundaries and divisions through a community-based art process between the New Haven Correctional Facility, Goffe Street Armory and neighborhood.

Time Travel

Students in the ACES ECA Creative Writing Department worked with architect and photographer Duo Dickinson. Rooms have lives independent of ours. Connect to zombie architecture in space, image, and words.

Thank you to everyone who helped make this year's special projects possible.

Artist Residency Program

Saturday & Sunday, October 21 – 22
12 – 6pm
Ely Center of Contemporary Art
51 Trumbull Street

Ely Center of Contemporary Art hosts its first Artist Residency program this fall. Artists and artist groups include Courtney Lytle, Nasty Women Film Festival, Shilo Ratner, Anna Robinson-Sweet, Jean Scott and Marcela Staudenmaier.

Each artist or collective occupies a room in the historic 1905 Elizabethan style John Slade Ely House to conduct their artistic practice, including painting, illustration, social practice, video and film. Nasty Women Film Festival will interact with the public throughout the month, hosting panels with filmmakers about pressing social and political concerns facing us all.

Visit elycenter.org for more events and the latest details.

November Programs

Nasty Women Film Festival

Opening and Screenings: November 7 & 8

The Ely Center of Contemporary Art, 51 Trumbull Street

Nasty Women New Haven (NWNH) invites all New England film makers, experienced or novice, to participate in the Nasty Women Film Event. The power of art to illuminate issues and build community has been demonstrated throughout the ages, most recently through the Nasty Women Art Installation, and we plan to do it again!

The aim of this event is to unite and give voice to all members of society and to raise awareness of issues affecting women, immigrants, and those who have been marginalized under the current administration. Filmmaking is a critical agent of social change, and the NWNH Film Event offers an opportunity for artists to share their voice, art, and, stories in an open and inclusive forum.

We encourage all submissions to represent themes of women and LGBTQ issues, racism, and immigration and refugee issues.

All submission donations benefit Planned Parenthood of Southern New England, Integrated Refugee and Immigration Services, Make the Road CT.

Resident X

Curated by Sarah Fritchey

December 1, 2017 – February 24, 2018

Resident X is a group show that introduces the idea of the “Artist Residency” as circumstantial form.

The six artists in the show have not applied for residencies, nor have they sought out the unconventional places where they make work. Rather they find themselves consigned to one place for an extended period of time—a hospital bed, subway train, car, airplane, cubical, non-visual world—and get to making art.

Artists will include Jonathan Gitelson, Keith Johnson, Katie Jurkiewicz, Sam Messer, Carmen Papalia and Dushko Petrovich.

Flatfile: Annual Open Call

Artspace announces an open call for artists interested in joining our Flatfile Collection. The Collection was started in 2000 and expanded in 2010 with the aid of an Institute of Museum and Library Science Grant, and holds over 1,000 works on paper by 150 artists from across the country.

Between Beauty and Decay

Curated by Erin Joyce

December 1, 2017 – February 24, 2018

Between Beauty and Decay examines humanity in the age of conflict. The artists in this show come from geopolitical backgrounds that deeply inform their work, identifying as American Indian, American, and Middle Eastern. Each use digital media, performance and installation to contemplate their contemporary landscapes, exploring land as a physical, emotional and psychological life-affirming and life-sustaining form. The show confronts with unflinching beauty and terror the realities of what happens when humanity is at odds with the “other” and the natural world.

Artists will include Andrew Erdos, Basma Al Sharif, Nicholas Galanin and Starr Hardridge. Erin Joyce is an independent curator, art critic, and scholar of contemporary art.

This exhibition represents the next step in the research-based practice, which focuses on contemporary histories of Indigenous North American politics, the politics of the Middle East and North Africa and their diaspora, and U.S. land rights and environmental justice.

What Is Artspace?

For more than 30 years, Artspace has championed the ideas and artistic concerns of local artists and created space for exhibitions on the most urgent issues of our time. Topics have spanned the AIDS crisis (Interrupted Lives, 1991), immigration (101 Dresses, 2003), globalization (Factory Direct, 2005), climate change (Marie Celeste, 2011), political protest (Vertical Reach, 2015), and racial bias in the criminal justice system (Arresting Patterns, 2015-16).

Artspace has been at the forefront of New Haven's arts scene, taking risks on behalf of local artists to advance their careers. Touchstone programs like our Summer Apprenticeship Program for New Haven Public School teens; our speed networking which fosters conversations between artists and elected, appointed and grassroots activists and leaders; this annual City-Wide Open Studios festival; and our Flatfile Collection showcasing exceptional works on paper create a vital hub so that artists and the community they live in can thrive together.

Founded by artists in the mid 1980s, Artspace is a dynamic non-profit organization whose mission is to catalyze artistic activities; connect contemporary artists, audiences, and resources; and to enrich art experiences and activate art spaces. We are dedicated to supporting emerging visual artists because we believe that a community such as ours is enriched immeasurably by actions and activities conceived and created by them.

Yes, I would like to support the Artspace community with a tax-deductible gift!

Hundreds of artists, too many to list in this space, have contributed their time and artworks to support Artspace's mission—we could not do our work without them, and we thank them profusely.

Artspace apologizes for any omissions or errors to this list in progress.

We are grateful to all the organizations, businesses and individuals who helped make this year's City-Wide Open Studios a success. Thank you!
